

Birdathon 2020 - How to Participate

There are many ways to join Birdathon and make a difference for wildlife.

Virtual Teams

Team leaders can create Birdathon experiences that allow participants to bird together, but separately. Depending on your team, you may be in touch via text while birding at different locations, arrange a virtual meeting to tally up your sightings and celebrate afterward, or take turns birding at the same spot.

Solo Birdathon

Go out on your own or with members of your household. We have several teams that are birding together as a couple or family from the same household. We support individual efforts.

Backyard Birdathon

If you have WiFi and birds, you are good to go! With this option, you can bird and talk or just listen in via phone or video and come up with a giant Backyard Birdathon bird list. Or, go ahead and bird in your backyard and send us your report at the end of the day.

Birding Over Several Days or a Month

While teams traditionally cover many locations in just one day, another possibility is one location over the course of many days.

Get Creative and Have Fun

- Bird by Ear — How many songs and calls can you learn to identify from home?
- A Daily Yard List for a Month — Do all your favorites show up every day? Create your own daily survey process.
- A Neighborhood Walk List — If you will be exercising in your neighborhood, that could be the perfect time keep track of your bird neighbors.
